TO S—— N——.

When the smile that reposes
So sweet on thy face,
Shall fade, with the roses
That add to its grace—

When the light shall be shaded
That plays from thy eye,
And thy heart's promise faded,
That's beating so high,

Oh come, tho' forsaken,
And repose on my breast,
And oft shalt thou waken,
More calm and more blest.

Misfortunes will hover
Round Beauty so weak,
But a shield like a lover,
Were fully to seek.

March, 1822. YORICK.

For the Saturday Evening Post.

A decision in Law, interesting to the Ladies, in the case of Black vs. Blue.

The eyes that glow with sparkling jet,
And those that swim in orbs of blue;
Both versus Azure, strove to get
The prize to Beauty's empire due.

The Courts below were mov'd, but fail'd
To solve a case of such impression;
Even pleaders melted at the tale,
'Twas told with such a soft expression.

Conflicting claims inflame dispute,
Black was too bold, and Blue too stupid;
At length this most important suit,
Came before Mr. Justice Cupid.

And never was a case before
Perplex'd with such intense confusion—
And never had the dark rob'd corps
Before been fee'd with such profusion.

The witnesses were—Burning kisses;
The advocates—Voluptuous sighs;
The proofs—Unutterable blisses;
And the reporters—Exstacies.

Forbear—to both the prize is due—
('Twas thus the God decreed,) forbear!
Woman is fair with eyes of blue;
With eyes of black, she still is fair.

Black, more vivacity impart—
In blue, more tenderness we find;
Black indicates finesse and art,
Blue expresses gentleness of mind.

Black is too subject to caprice—
Woe to the gazer's heart; but Blue
Is free from guile and artifice,
Is tender, delicate and true.

In Black, I've plac'd my shafts of fire;
But Blue in liquid languor roll;
Black, sparkling black, transports inspire,
But Blue enchants, dissolves the soul.

For the Saturday Evening Post.

INSCRIBED TO G. M——Y.

The world so fair before us,
And nature blooming all around,
The glow of feeling o'er us,
And ev'ry thought with pleasure crown'd,
How sweet thus in life's morning
To cast abroad the mental eyes,
Where hope, each scene adorning,
Paints prospects bright as fancy's dyes.

We onward rove delighted,
Nor think the present happy hour
By care can e'er be blighted,
Or that misfortune's clouds shall low'r;
We careless are, and smiling,
And reckless of the coming day,
With fancy bright beguiling,
And basking in life's sunny ray.

But hopes so warm should perish!
That man, alas! should quickly say,
These hopes we must not cherish,
They are the sunbeams of a day;
Though bright their radiance, never
Shall cruel these sparks of soul approve,
Experience teaches ever
That man conjoin'd with woe must move.

The world may thus deceive us,
Its pencil'd joys all quickly fade,
The hopes of pleasure leave us,
Its sunny hours be turn'd to shade:
But when the heart is glowing
With virtue's pure and holy flame,
The ills of life, tho' flowing,
Shall bring no sorrows but the name.

Lines occasioned by an interesting excursion on the 15th of May, 1821.

On the banks of the Schuylkill, oft I have wander'd,
And view'd, with delight, the stream gliding below;
And mem'ry, in tracing the scene, has oft ponder'd
On joys which the fifteenth of May did bestow.

O long let me cherish the fond recollection,
That recalls to my mind those moments gone by:
And renews each sensation, the gift of reflection,
Which the pen cannot paint, nor language descry.

It was then I beheld the grass greener growing,
For the mild beams of Friendship shed lustre around;
It was then I beheld the stream clearer flowing,
And heard the sweet music in echo resound;

Yes, Friendship had banish'd each care and each sorrow,
And deep in my bosom the seeds of love sown—
And thus made the stream, and the lawn seem to borrow
The crystal, and emerald, that were not their own.

Now, since the earth, by its annual rotation,
Again decks the banks in Spring's magic array;
Hope points to the future, in anticipation,
And whispers, we'll meet on the fifteenth of May.

LANSDOWN.

Moral and Religious.

THOU MUST DIE!

When we bring to mind this awful sentence, which has been passed upon every creature inhabiting this ball of earth, how insignificant appear the low pursuits which agitate the toiling race of man. He who has been for a series of years building airy castles, and preparing for future years of enjoyment—who has been filling his barns with plenty, and his stores with abundance—how is he astonished, when to him is sent this awful summons! His proud projects vanish into emptiness, and more worthless than chaff appear those vast regions of grandeur which had called forth all the energies of his mind. Not so the Christian, who

"Has made the statutes of the Lord
His study and delight."

To him, death comes not unlooked for—he knows it is the lot of our frail nature, and he rejoices in it as the road to blessedness. Sustained by the hope of glory, he sinks not under the rendings of pain—the agonies of disease are considered as the price of his passport to a happier state, and, resigned, he receives the cup of affliction. The death of the Christian is the revival of faith. Those who stand at the bedside—who behold him throw off the shackles of mortality—his countenance beaming with heavenly smiles, and his lips uttering praise—must surely be convinced that he has followed no "cunningly devised fables"—and even skeptics must be induced to wish, that their latter end might be like his.

VAIN GLORY.

The Christian does not pray to be delivered from glory, but from vain glory.—He also is ambitious of glory, and a candidate for honour—but glory, in whose estimation? Honour in whose judgment?—Not of those whose censures can take nothing from his innocence; whose approbation can take nothing from his guilt; whose opinions are as fickle as their actions, and their lives as transitory as their praise—who cannot search his heart, seeing that they are ignorant even of their own. The Christian, then, seeks his glory in the estimation, and his honour, in the judgment of Him alone, who

"From the bright Empyrean, he sits
High-thron'd above all height, casts down his eye,
His own works, and man's works, at once to view!"

The Prudent Woman;

OR, THE HISTORY OF ELVIRA.

But a few minutes ago, the breath departed from her mortal frame, and Elvira became an inanimate piece of clay. Her children weep around her body, and her husband expresses that sensibility, which has ever characterised his life. Her relatives will lament her decease, and humanity will long remember her virtues. Let me explain, and endeavour justly to applaud the talents and virtues of Elvira. She was the daughter of a man who opposed the torrent of adversity, with industry and fortitude. He struggled for his family with success, and experienced from them in his age that affection and duty, which enables us to endure the woes of age, with tranquillity and resignation. Often did he snatch her with parental ardour, from the bosom of her affectionate mother, and as often was she reconveyed to the source of nourishment and comfort, by maternal solicitude.

As she advanced in years, her education was attended to with affection, under the guidance of reason. Every degree of instruction was bestowed on her, which the country, in which she was born, could afford. Possessed of the greatest endowments, her mind anticipated the lessons of her teachers; and at the age of fifteen, she was acknowledged to be both beautiful in person, and accomplished in mind. Pride acknowledged her acquisitions, and even envy confessed the graces and merits of Elvira.

But at this period her trials commenced. In the space of three days she was deprived of both her parents. How calamitous was her situation! how extreme was her grief! The truly filial heart alone can entertain an adequate idea of her anguish. She had attended them with solicitude, during their sickness, wept over their coffins with true piety, and still venerated their memory with the most ardent affection. She was then not conscious, that the public office which was occupied by her father, had administered support to the family. Without the levity, but with the hopes, which are natural to youth, she had looked forward to competency, and occasionally to affluence. From the bosom of an affectionate mother, she had imbibed delicacy; and on the knee of her father, she had been taught to exult in a prospect of wealth.

How distressing, for a period, were the feelings of the maiden! As a daughter she endured extreme anguish; and found herself exposed to all the difficulties of a dependent situation. No relation proffered assistance; and after the sale of her father's effects, (every deduction having been made) her guardian discovered, that only fifty pounds remained. He gave her that counsel which was worthy of the office he had undertaken, and received her into his house. So sweet was the disposition, so mild was the deportment of Elvira, that she conciliated the esteem of all with whom she conversed. She was fully convinced of the narrowness of her circumstances; and therefore founded her expectations on propriety of appearance, docility of mind, and rectitude of heart. But shortly society was deprived of the amiable consort of her guardian. In her she lost, a second time, a tender mother.

A few weeks after this mournful event her guardian was hurried out of existence by a fever; but before he expired, he requested an interview. She attended his summons. After a short conversation, he sent for Hilario, his nephew. As they sat at his bed-side, he thus addressed them. "But a few days ago I regularly made a will, which entitles you to equal shares of my property. May that property, in this instance, continue undivided." He scarcely had ceased to speak, before he expired. His meaning was understood. After due respect had been paid to his memory, Hilario paid his addresses to Elvira. She was far from being insensible to his merit; and, mindful of the last admonition of her guardian, bestowed her heart and her hand according to the dictates of prudence, and the sentiments of love.

She continued four years to exhibit an illustrious example of conjugal and maternal affection; when the world was deprived of her virtues. Yet her memory must be ever revered, especially when we recollect, that she was not abject in adversity, nor insolent in prosperity; and that she in the most exemplary manner, discharged the duties of the daughter, the wife, the mother, and the christian.

COURTSHIP AND MARRIAGE.

Jasper, said my uncle Jonta, in associating with the ladies, remember the advice of President Adams—"Make no advances unless you have every assurance of being well received." If you have a mind to marry, your uncle is an old soldier, he has seen much in his time, and can advise you the best mode of besieging the fair sex. Always act independently in your courtships. Never go sneaking like a desponding lover. Never go simpering after any of them, nor be a slipper carrier to the ball room. Beware of making yourself too cheap among them by your attentions, for too much attention often produces contempt; and I cannot bear the idea of my boy being slighted by any girl. Remember that "if one wont marry another will," and that "there is as good fish in the sea as ever were caught." If any of them should once slight your addresses be off like a cannon ball—never smile on them again, till you are certain they have heartily repented. Mrs. L—— once told me that a gentleman asked her to have him, she replied "Sir, I'll thank you if you never mention that subject over again." To which he answered, "Madam, I am glad of it, for if you had said yes, I know not how I should have got off."—She never was more mortified in her life, and I'll engage she did not treat her next lover in like manner. Now, Jasper, continued my uncle, if you marry, I hope you will get a girl that your uncle would rejoice to offer a home to in his barracks—none of those flirting jay-birds who appear like a wax figure, only fit to be looked at. Let her be one (if so be there should be no cook in the camp) that will cheerfully get your supper after you return from the field of battle, or fatigue duty. Be sure you marry for love, and that your girl loves you, for where there is a mutual regard all is harmony and peace. Mind ye, dont get a virago—to be locked to such a one, for life, would be misery indeed. You would be a finger post by which all your acquaintance would be directed to avoid a like misfortune—no virago shall ever have a ration in your uncle's quarters. Marriage is honourable—'tis a source of happiness when congenial hearts unite, but horror on horror, when persons of opposite tempers are linked together by it—it is worse than going to battle with a rusty musket, an empty cartouch box, or a tight pair of shoes.

Money is useful, but never let that be an object with you in making a choice of a wife. I could never agree with Dr. Johnson that fools marry for love, wise men for money! I would rather see my boy married to a neat, worthy, agreeable girl without a cent, than to a rich, slovenly, giddy flirt.—Though soldiers have to put up with much in tent and barracks, that is not so cleanly, yet none more admire cleanliness than they. While travelling I have lost many a good looking meal, from a slight of my landlady and her cooks. A man though somewhat slovenly himself, likes to see women always neat, clean and tidy in their houses, dress and cookery—a slut I despise as much as I do a coward in battle. Now, my boy, you know how to manage to get a wife that your uncle would be happy in seeing you have. Bring such a one to the barracks as soon as you please, and while I receive pay or rations, she and you shall share with me.

THE PRUSSIAN SOLDIER.

A STORY.

There is a certain principal of obscurity, that accommodates the events in history and tradition, and the half-remembered transactions of childhood, to the poet's lyre. Too much truth seems to blight the aspirations of fancy: facts must be remodelled in the cast of the imagination, before they can partake of the sublimity of fiction.

Our own country abounds with incidents, as well traditionary as recorded, that are continually soliciting the mind of fancy to describe them; and even the events and the agents in our revolutionary struggle, have already put on an autumnal character—fast fading from our remembrance; and in proportion as they cease to be familiar, do they increase in dignity and importance. The actors of that glorious epoch are, one after another, stealing silently to the grave; and, in a few years, not an eye-witness will be left to the declaration of independence, or the retreat of our desponding forces across the Delaware! How much cherished and venerated will be, in a little time, the solitary individual who shall survive his compatriot witnesses of those great events! The soldier who fought at Breed's Hill, or at Saratoga, will be honored by posterity as the patriarch of the republic. Among those who have departed, and even among the broken down, hopeless relics of the army, there was much to arrest the imagination, and to delight the mind in retrospect. I remember, when a child, to have my attention attracted towards several of those forlorn pilgrims to eternity, who have now sunk into the tomb forgotten; many of them bore the scars of the great cause, to remind their country, that they had deserved well of the bounties she might be disposed to bestow on them. It is the fate of war to make many beggars among those enlisted under her banner, and for thirty years after the revolution, the maimed soldier was the most common subject of charity that asked a pittance at your door. Hundreds of foreigners, that had either become connected with our army by the chances of war, or had been left behind on the evacuation of the British troops, were to be seen, stroling through the villages of the interior, in wretchedness; incapable of imitating the natives in returning from the tented field to the pursuits of agriculture, or of relinquishing the habits of the soldier for the toils of the woodman.

There was, in my childhood, among these unhappy sufferers, a man called by the villagers, and known among the children of the neighbourhood—and children, from whatever cause, seem ever to take deeper interest in such matters—by the name of Philip, the Prussian. He had been attached to the Hessian mercenaries sent out here to aid in subjugating the colonies, and after the memorable slaughter at Red Bank, had deserted to the American camp. On the termination of the war, he wandered about the villages of New-England; and, although he received at every door he knocked at, a hearty welcome, and a generous supply to his wants, Philip was never known to ask either.—For more than twenty years, he marched his regular rounds through half a dozen towns in Connecticut, and as regular as day succeeded to night, with his pack thrown over his shoulders to renew his unwearied marchings, and ever-constant visitings. The houses of officers under whom he had served, were the places of his resort, where he enjoyed something like what the ancient feudatories in Europe partook, under the roof of their liege lords; for military government is completely despotic, and the soldier, on being disbanded, could entertain no other feelings towards his former commander, than those of a vassal towards his superior. I can even now seem to see the little soldier trudging along the highway, with hasty steps, and bending head, with no other companion than his pipe, and his oaken staff.—There was not a child to whom he was not known, as well on account of the singularity of his appearance as by the kindness of his demeanour. Partial to his former pursuits, perhaps from their having formed the profession of his youth, he still wore the remnant of his military uniform—an hussar coat, and the remains of a cap, that had once been surmounted with bear-skin, projecting its front piece over his small, animated grey eyes, and shaggy brows. His wallat, which had once been a soldier's knapsack, was attached, in a manner peculiar to himself, to his forehead. His pipe, constantly in his mouth, vomiting forth clouds of smoke, and, when he would renew its fuel, he paused under the shade of the wide spreading oaks, by the road side, and if occasion demanded rest to his wearied limbs, he stretched himself to repose beneath their canopy.

In the early settlement of N. England, certain trees distinguished by their size and beauty were reserved from the general destruction of the forest for land-marks, and expositors of boundaries. In the scene of poor Philip's wanderings, there were many of these venerable trees stretching their wide-extended arms over the roads, and inviting to repose the traveller and pilgrim.

One of the solitary survivors of the woods, which had reigned with its progenitors for centuries—aye, many centuries, in undisturbed dominion of the soil—spread its exuberant foliage on every side, at the corner of two roads; its branches stretched forth from the parent trunk in every direction, like a radii from a common centre.—Here the remnant of the Indian tribes, which dwelt in the neighbourhood, were accustomed, when passing on their hunting excursions from the valleys of the south to the wilds of the north, to repose themselves in the shade—perhaps, through a secret sympathy springing from similarity of fortune.

This venerable survivor of the ancient forest, has long since shared the fate of its youthful contemporaries; but, even now, it is no uncommon spectacle, to witness the Indians slumbering upon the green carpet by the remains of the old oak's trunk! Here, too, the little Prussian soldier was accustomed to refresh himself, after a toilsome march beneath a summer's sun. How often have I crept behind the wall, screened from the traveller's view, and peeped thro' the crevices to see him light his pipe, with his magical flint and steel! and listened to his tremulous voice, as he sang in solitude some martial air in his native tongue; perhaps, revolving on the incidents of infancy! Poo Philip! he has long since rejoined the companions of his childhood! His head, whitened with the frosts of seventy winters, and bowed down with the toils of war, has long since reposed, for the last time, on the lap of its parent earth!

Whether his adopted country provided for his maintenance I know not: but his military habits would not have permitted him to be stationary, had he been blessed with a place where to lay his head; at least in summer—and, perhaps, the same habits reconciled him to the confinement of winter. But, so soon as the ice dissolved before the returning sun, and the cowslip put forth its blossoms by the streamlet's side, the little soldier renewed his journeying campaign, and was hailed by the villagers as the harbinger of spring! That spring, at last, returning for the twentieth time, since he commenced his solitary wanderings, brought with it poor Philip no more!

Messrs. Editors,

Being of opinion that the press is the best, and perhaps the only channel by which the actions of different institutions ought to be laid before the public, for their censure or applause, allow me to say a few words, in favour of an association organized in this city, under the title of the "Ciceronian Society," consisting of a select number of young gentlemen from various schools, who meet together for the purpose of improving themselves in the art of public speaking.

The third annual exhibition of this society, took place at Washington Hall, on the 25th ult. at which I was present; and I can assure you, that the time was exceedingly well employed, in hearing the young gentlemen recite their various pieces. The recitations were divided into six parts with a national march, or air, between each, as also preceding, and at the close of the performance; it is not right that I should take up too much of your paper, by descanting upon the merits of the different candidates for fame, I shall therefore content myself with mentioning a few; and first, I commence with J. Hazlehurst, who recited the part of Cassius, from the quarrel scene in Julius Cæsar; as also that beautiful speech from the Æneid, of Æneas to Queen Dido, in which he described the fall of Troy; in both he acquitted himself with great credit; his voice is clear and distinct, and his action pleasing and graceful. A prose piece on Fame was also spoken by V. Boyd, and what greatly enhanced the value of the piece, as also that on Literary Societies, spoken by a young gentleman named N. Hatfield, was, that the pieces were their own productions. The scene from the Mid-summer Night's Dream, act 2. scene 1. was also performed by various members of this society, and was very well managed. The rest of the young gentlemen were received in a favour, and rewarded with the approbation of a large and respectable audience. Upon the whole I cannot recollect when I have been better pleased, and the pleasure of the teachers who very properly must have been great, on witnessing the well merited applause that each of their pupils received. At the conclusion the Anniversary Oration was delivered by a young gentleman named J. Fox, with fine effect, in which he expressed the thanks of the society to the teachers, and exhorted them to be doubly diligent against the next anniversary.

Foreign Intelligence.

[By the Euphrates, arrived at New York.]

The cause of the Greeks seems to have awakened a spirit of philanthropy and generosity in many individuals in Europe. Five hundred combatants were at Leghorn who were going to fight on the side of the Greeks. These men were supplied with two Paoli and an half daily by Baron Delberg. A Mr. Wulwebar, at the Hague, had contributed to this purpose, 2,500,000 Dutch florins.

Intermixed with several excellent speeches, at the late meeting of the Concentric Society of Liverpool, were many appropriate toasts, among which was the following suitable to a Christmas season: "May Turkey be roasted by the fire of Liberty, and be well basted by Greece."

Accounts received from India, state, that Mr. Buckingham, the editor of a Calcutta newspaper, having inserted some article in his paper, which was thought to offend the Bishop of Calcutta, had in consequence been threatened with summary banishment by the Marquis of Hastings' orders. The defence of the Queen was also prohibited in the Madras papers, though the evidence of Majocci, &c. was fully published.

It is stated that the Caffrees are about to make war upon the British settlement at Algoa Bay, Cape of Good Hope.

The deposits in the Bank of Savings at Liverpool, up to the 1st of January, was 70,000 pounds.

There was but 24 days of clear cloudless sky in the neighbourhood of Liverpool, during the last 18 months.

An East Indiaman, the Thames, of 1350 tons, outward bound, went ashore on the 2d of February, on the Bowdler Bank.—Eleven persons were killed by the falling of her masts.

In consequence of the high tide on Christmas-Day, at Venice, the square of St. Marks presented the appearance of a large basin, surrounded by porticos. Gondolas were, with ease, rowed round it. This phenomenon has only been seen once within the memory of the oldest person, and that was on Christmas day 1744.

The Bank of the United States remitted two millions of dollars, in the Stock of that institution, to England, for sale; upon the strength of which they are drawing bills of exchange, at a premium of twelve and an half per cent.

It is said, that within the last twelve months the Underwriters at Lloyd's have paid a million for losses.

King of Rome.—Captain Lockerby, in his voyage to Pulo-Penang, touched at St. Helena, where Mr. O'Connor related to him a conversation he had with Madame Bertrand. That lady stated, that soon before the death of Bonaparte, one asked him, in the course of an interview, "under whose protection he wished to leave his son?"—"I will have my son under the protection of the French army," was the reply. May not this have some affinity to the last words of the Emperor, "Mon fils—aux armees, &c."

Remarkable Death.—Mrs. Patient, relict of Mr. Patient, Wyly, Wilts.—What renders her death most remarkable is the singular fact that she had frequently expressed her hope to "live long enough to see her daughter married, and then she would die cheerfully;" her wish has been literally accomplished. Her daughter was married on Tuesday last; the anxiously affectionate parent took a small piece of the bride cake, drank the health of the bride and bridegroom in a glass of wine, and instantly expired.—Cheltenham Chron.

Hickman, the boxer, was conveyed to the scene of action by his backer, (one of the Rothschilds,) in a barouche and four, with two out-riders, and a man in front sounding a bugle.—Mr. Rothschild, it is said, lost $10,000 by the result.

France.—It seems there have been insurrectionary movements at Brest, Belfort and Rochfort; the military have been the principal leaders. These risings, the French papers inform us (when they are allowed to hint at them) are put down; but if so, it is only for the moment.

Mr. Loveday's petition has been discussed in the Chamber of Peers, and finally got rid of by a call for the order of the day.

One of the witnesses, who was lately examined for the prosecution on the trial of the supposed murderers of Faulder, has confessed, on his death bed, that all he said respecting the matter, was totally false, and that the only motive he had for this foul perjury, was "the pleasure which I expected to derive from going to see the country." It will be recollected, that the unfortunate persons thus falsely accused and executed, strongly protested their innocence to the last moment of their lives.

Disturbances in Ireland.

Ireland is evidently in a state of great disturbance, and many murders, burglaries, and daring outrages continue to be committed. The London Courier of the 7th of February, contains five columns of official documents, laid before Parliament, from the Marquis Wellesley, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, giving particulars of the late outrages committed in the various counties.

A serious conflict had taken place between the inhabitants of Kilmichael; they have since come forward to surrender their arms and take the oath of allegiance. It is said the only parish holding out, was Ivelea. On the 2d Feb. a desperate attack was made by the peasantry upon the police at Churchtown, in Cork county. In this conflict, which lasted an hour, with fire arms, the rebels shot a centinel, killed four other men, and wounded many others, and carried off many stand of arms. The insurgents, to the number of 1000, approached Newmarket, but on the first fire of the military dispersed.

From the Cork Chronicle of Jan. 28.

Mill-street.—The same party, after committing the murder of Mr. Brereton, and, probably, after receiving an accession of force, as we are informed by a gentleman who came in the Killarney coach, made a desperate attack on Friday last, upon this town. They assailed the Bridewell, (probably, with a view of rescuing some prisoners) and broke the windows before the military could act; but we understand they were finally beaten off by about fourteen of the 39th regiment.

Newmarket.—This town is situated in the northern part of the county, which was, from the commencement of the disturbances, the most lawless and the most obnoxious to the inroads of the insurgents. It appears from a letter of lieut. Green, which has been received in this city, dated the 26th instant, that the insurgents, to the amount of about one thousand, had approached the town, about four o'clock on Friday last, for the purpose of, as it was supposed, making an attack upon it, when Captain Kepprock and Lt. Green, with about 80 men of the 22d regiment, went out to meet them. On the first fire of the military they fled in all directions; but several were killed and wounded, and 3 prisoners were taken and brought into the town.

Limerick, Feb. 2.—About six o'clock on Thursday evening, as George Massey, Esq. of Glenwilliam, was on his return from Newcastle, in this county, (where he presided as Chairman, at a Special Session under the Road Act) accompanied by a Police Constable, he was fired at from near a house at Odellville, by an assassin, who could not be more than four or five yards distant.—Mr. Massey happily escaped uninjured, though the bullet passed so near his forehead as to stun him at the moment.

Thursday night, Mr. Hastings, an apprentice of Surgeon Murray, of Rathkeale, was fired at by a ruffian whilst passing through a lane; the ball passed through his hat; and, fortunately, did not accomplish the design of the assassin, who was accompanied by a second man, both disguised. It is supposed the shot was intended for a Magistrate in that town.

Rathkeale, Feb. 1, 1822.—Last night, about the hour of twelve o'clock, the house of major Hare, of Mount Henry, about three miles from this town, was attacked and entered by an armed party, who immediately proceeded up stairs to the Major's bedroom, when, it is supposed, they met some resistance, and they murdered him. He was shot through the body across the chest, the ball entering at the right side, passing out at the left. They took three excellent guns from the house, with some ammunition. His wife was in the room the whole of the time; they murdered him on the lobby.

The following notice was posted at Clonmel:

"Take this down if you dare."

PROCLAMATION.

"Reason—We, the united body of the Commissioners, commiserating our sad state, and determined to abolish all Tithes, Taxes, and Rent, do offer a reward of 80 pounds for the head of a Head Minister, 50 for a Curate, 20 for a Proctor, and 10 for a Bailiff. MARSHAL ROCK."

House of Lords, Feb. 5.—Yesterday his majesty opened parliament in person. The doors of the House of Lords were not opened till 12 o'clock, and in half an hour after, every bench except the two front ones, were filled by Peeresses, and the female part of their families, and other ladies of distinction. They were dressed in trains and feathers, and when they were all arranged, the appearance was brilliant in the extreme. The attendance of Peers in their robes was very numerous. His majesty entered the House at 2 o'clock precisely, preceded by his great officers of state. The gentlemen of the House of Commons were then summoned by the Usher of the Black Rod. They entered with the speaker at five minutes after 2, when his majesty, having taken his seat on the throne, delivered the following most gracious speech:

"My Lords and Gentlemen—" I have the satisfaction of informing you, that I continue to receive from foreign powers the strongest assurances of their friendly disposition towards this country. It is impossible for me not to feel deeply interested in any event that may have a tendency to disturb the peace of Europe. My endeavours have therefore been directed, in conjunction with my allies, to the settlement of the differences which have unfortunately arisen between the Court of St. Petersburg and the Ottoman Porte; and I have reason to entertain hopes that these differences will be satisfactorily adjusted. In my late visit to Ireland, I derived the most sincere gratification from the loyalty and attachment manifested by all classes of my subjects. With this impression, it must be matter of the deepest concern to me, that a spirit of outrage, which has led to daring and systematic violations of the law, has arisen, and still prevails in some parts of that country. I am determined to use all the means in my power for the protection of the persons and property of my loyal and peaceable subjects. And it will be for your immediate consideration, whether the existing laws are sufficient for this purpose. Notwithstanding this serious interruption of public tranquillity, I have the satisfaction of believing that my presence in Ireland has been productive of very beneficial effects, and all descriptions of my people may confidently rely upon the just and equal administration of the laws, and upon my paternal solicitude for their welfare.

On the 7th of February, lord Liverpool gave notice in the house of lords, that he intended to move a postponement of the ordinary business, in order to enter upon an immediate consideration of the state of Ireland; information received by ministers respecting which, called for prompt and more efficient measures. A similar motion was made in the house of commons, the same evening, by lord Londonderry, who distinctly stated, that it was the intention of his majesty's ministers to propose the re-enactment of the insurrectionary act.

By some late order, the King of England has unknighted all the Irish Knights as they were called—in other words, those who had received the "accolade" in the drunken frolics of the Castle from the Lord Lieutenant, for the time being—Lady Morgan's husband, Sir Charles, is of this number, and she is now plain Mrs. Morgan.

The popular commotions were subsiding in most parts of Spain.

Miscellaneous.

Capt. Mauren, arrived at N. York from Matanzas, states, that the schooner E. H. Symmes, of Georgetown, from Rio Grande via St. Thomas, was lost on Crugo del Padre, near Point Yeacos, on the 10th ult. and vessel and cargo lost. The crew constructed a raft and went ashore to the Key. The next day they were attacked by the crews of two piratical schooners, with about forty men, who stripped them of their clothing, and beat them very severely. A passenger on board was knocked down with a musket, and then shot dead, and no doubt all hands would have shared the same fate, but the appearance of a fishing boat, which came and took them off, and brought them into Matanzas. In consequence of this outrage, a number of American Captains, with their crews, 50 in number, manned a schr. with four nine pound guns, &c. and went in pursuit of them. They returned into port the day before the Agenora sailed, but Capt. M. did not learn with what success.

The schr. Swan, Capt. Skinner, arrived at New-York, left Vera Cruz as late as the 12th of March. The Fort of St. Juan de Ulloa was still in possession of the Royalists. Flags of truce were frequently communicating, and an order was soon expected for its surrender. Preparations were making at Vera Cruz to take the Fort by force should it not be given up.

The first Congress convened at Mexico on the 24th of February. Perfect harmony subsisted throughout the empire. An ambassador had been sent to Spain to solicit one of the Royal Family to preside as Emperor of Mexico, provided he would reside in the country. It was, however, expected that Yturbibe would be elected. Most of the Royalists had emigrated to Spain and her provinces, carrying their valuables and property.

Captain Stevenson, who arrived at Baltimore, in the schooner Blucher, from Carraccas, gives the following information:

Puerto Cavello was declared in a state of blockade on the 20th February, and that the Columbian armed brig President, sailed from Laguira on the 21st to enforce it, soon to be followed by the Flecheras, and joined by a squadron expected from Maracaibo. A report was prevalent two or three days previous to the Blucher's sailing, that the royalists had evacuated Coro, and were on their retreat towards Puerto Cavello, in front of which place the position of the patriot lines had been so altered as to intercept them, should they attempt to enter that fortress. There had been a skirmish of outposts near Valencia, on the 26th February, in which the royalists were defeated with the loss of some prisoners. Intelligence had been received from Guayaquil as late as the 31st of December, from Lima to the 7th of November, and from Santiago de Chili, to the 17th August. On the 22d November, Gen. Sucre and Col. Tolra, of the royal army, agreed upon terms of an armistice for ninety days, through the province of Quito, from which circumstance it was supposed President Bolivar would not find it necessary to proceed to the capital, (Quito) but return to Bogota. Callao capitulated to gen. San Martin on the 19th September; and Guatemelo declared its independence on the 15th September.

An ordinance has been passed in Baltimore, of considerable consequence to those engaged in the flour trade:—The inspector of flour is obliged to weigh every sixth barrel offered for inspection, and if any deficiency in weight be found, to weigh every barrel. A fine of ten cents is imposed if one pound be wanting, twenty if two, and if there be three or more pounds wanting, twenty-five cents for every pound deficient of proper weight. The fines are to be paid by the person offering flour for inspection.

One hundred young men of Cross Creek township, Washington county, in this state, have adopted a series of resolutions, of which the following may serve for a specimen.

"We will abstain from the use of imported goods of every description, as far as possible, and give a decided preference to articles the growth and manufacture of our own country.

"We will in paying our addresses to the young ladies, give the most marked preference to such as clothe themselves in homespun, and make use of articles the growth of our own country."

On Wednesday last, (says the Newburyport Herald of Saturday,) Capt. Robert Follansbee, of Amesbury, was examined before Edward Darr, Esq. charged with attempting to take away the life of Mrs. Long, wife of Mr. Nathan Long, and committed for trial at the April term of the Supreme Court. It appeared, we understand, at the examination, that the prisoner endeavoured to cut the throat of Mrs. Long with a large knife, but did not inflict a mortal wound. The parties were particular friends; and no malice is thought to have been entertained towards her by the misguided man, who, for some time past, has been affected with religious melancholy; and he is said to have acted under the conviction of a divine command, in the commission of this unhappy deed.

George Withy, a distinguished preacher of the Society of Friends in England, has recently been visiting the several meetings in this vicinity. On sabbath last, he attended at Willistown, where a crowded congregation was gathered; every seat was occupied, and even the stair-way filled.—After near an hour's deep and unbroken silence, the preacher rose and addressed the meeting. Of his manner it may be said, that his voice is clear toned—his elocution free, and his whole delivery emphatic and impressive. The doctrines he urged were these: that man was a fallen and lost creature, for if he had not been there would have been no need of a Saviour—that "Jesus Christ and him crucified," was the only way of salvation—that morality, though excellent in itself, was yet utterly inefficacious for salvation—that "man might build his nest with the eagles, and soar among the stars, but it would avail nothing;" that there must be repentance of sin, renewal of spirit, the regeneration of the heart, or hell would be the inevitable portion of the unconverted—that the punishment of hell was not as some contended, a limited punishment but eternal; and in conclusion he asserted the doctrine of the divinity of the Saviour, and controverted the opinion which denied it. [Village Record.

The Court at Ipswich, (Mass.) was thronged on Wednesday morning, the 27th ult. in consequence of the sentence of the law being about to be passed on Jonathan Buffum and Preserved Sprague, for riotous conduct at Friends' Meeting, in Lynn, on the 14th and 17th of Feb. last.—Their counsel stated in mitigation, that Buffum was a mechanic of little property, with a family, and Sprague entirely destitute of property, with a large family of children. The court observed, that these facts, as well as the testimony to their general good character, and the probability that their offences had arisen from a delusion, or misconception of their rights, would have due influence in measuring the punishment. Buffum was then sentenced to pay a fine of $150, and Sprague $75.

The Court at the same time admonished the prisoners, that if these offences were repeated by them or their associates, the arm of the law would fall much more heavily on them.

The prisoners were then remanded, and sent back to the jail in Salem.

Law Intelligence.—It was lately decided in the Supreme Judicial Court at Boston, that a man convicted of a felony in New-York, who had not been pardoned, was not disqualified from being a witness in a criminal prosecution. Samuel Green, the person convicted of the murder of Billy Williams, in the state prison, on this witnesses' evidence, has, in consequence, received sentence of death. He is to be executed on the 25th inst.

The Jews—There are, it is said, six millions, five hundred and ninety-eight thousand Jews in the world; 3000 of whom live in the United States; one million in Poland; half a million in Germany, and fifty thousand in England; the remainder are scattered over the whole civilized world. In the days of Solomon the number of Jews did not exceed seven millions.

Extract of a letter, dated Jeremie, March 1.

"It is reported here that a squadron had arrived off, and blockaded the city of St. Domingo, and taken some Haytiens. The force is said to be one frigate, one sloop of war, two schrs. and two transports with troops.

Juvenile Heroism.—Two lads, one aged fourteen and the other twelve, sons of Mr. David Carnes, Boston, succeeded last Saturday, by their intrepidity, in saving another from a watery grave. Observing a skiff to upset with a young man in it, they launched a small boat from the wharf and immediately rowed to his assistance. The unfortunate youth was clinging to the skiff, when his brave deliverers effected their purpose in presence of a number of spectators.

Extraordinary Case of Dropsy.—Died, at Baltimore, on Sunday last, Mrs. Leroi, a French lady, aged twenty seven years, after having been tapped seventy-six times, by Dr. Chatard, in the space of two years and five months. The quantity of water obtained by the several operations amounts to eight hundred and seventy-one quarts, by measure. The deceased informed the Doctor, the first time he saw her, that she had already been tapped three times in Philadelphia, by Dr. Matthieu.

Thieves—A few evenings ago about 10 o'clock, a house in this town was entered through a window from the street, and a box of figs stolen—a few evenings previous the same house was entered, and a quantity of cigars stolen.—Another house within a few rods of this office was entered by some person, and a great coat stolen.—A few evenings ago an old lady was attacked in the street by two black men, who took away her shawl, and as was supposed were attempting to take a string of gold beads from her neck, when they were observed by a person passing, and made their escape. Mysterious Affair.—The minds of a considerable part of the city, have for a week or two past been painfully excited, by rumours and suspicions of a murder committed on one of our citizens, in a house of infamy, in that den of abominations, Coriærs-Hook. Suspicion and conjectures aside, however, it is an agreed fact, that a Mr. J. C. a man having a family—himself personally respectable—in regular settled business, and master of one of the Lodges in this city, has been missing, and absent from his family, and unheard of since last Monday night a fortnight. On the evening of that day, about ten o'clock, he was seen in Grand street, near the place where it is feared he was robbed, and murdered, in a state of partial inebriation. About two o'clock the same night, the neighbourhood was alarmed with the cry of murder, proceeding from a house of ill-fame, at the corner of Grand and Walnut streets, so loud and so long continued, as to induce some of the neighbours to open their windows to hearken. The cry of the suffering man seemed to proceed at first, from the house, and afterwards from the back yard attached to it. Five or six creditable men, neighbours, united in the foregoing account, as to what they heard.—They said the outcry was continued at intervals, from seven to ten minutes. They could distinctly hear the intreaty, "Don't murder me—don't murder me!" and again, as in the last extremity, he exclaimed, "I am a mason; is there no mason that can help me!" with other language expressive of his sufferings, which a mason, it is understood, might have comprehended, had there been one in the fraternity within the reach of his voice. Unhappily there was not; and the witnesses, when questioned why they did not themselves go to his relief, said, that the cry of murder was so common there, that they were no longer alarmed by it, or gave it a transient notice; like the peasants too often mocked by the cry of wolf! Several of the girls belonging to the house were brought up and examined, but nothing appearing, were discharged. Diligent search has been made by digging and otherwise, to find the man if possible, but no discovery has yet been made.

CURIOUS CIRCUMSTANCE.

The human being, who would run the gauntlet for freedom, so desperately, as the poor African appears to have done whose story is given below, should surely never again be brought under the lash of a task master.

The captain of a vessel from North Carolina, called upon the police for advisement respecting a slave he had unconsciously brought away in his vessel, under the following circumstances:—

Three or four days after he had got to sea, he began to be haunted every hour with tones of distress seemingly proceeding from a human voice in the very lowest part of the vessel. A particular scrutiny was finally instituted, and it was concluded that the creature, whatever, or whosoever it might be must be confined down in the run, under the cabin floor; and on boring a hole with an augur, and demanding, Who's there? a feeble voice responded, "poor negro, massa!" It was clear enough then that some runaway negro had hid himself there, before they sailed, trusting to providence for his ultimate escape. Having discovered him, however, it was impossible to give him relief, for the captain had stowed even his cabin so completely full with cotton, as but just to leave room for a small table for himself and the mate to eat off, and as for unloading at sea, that was pretty much out of the question. Accordingly there he had to lie, stretched at full length, for the tedious interval of thirteen days, till the vessel arrived in port and unloaded, receiving his food and drink through the augur hole.

The fellow's story is, now that he is released, that being determined to get away from slavery, he supplied himself with eggs and biscuit, and some jugs of water, which latter he was just on the point of depositing in his lurking place, when he discovered the captain at a distance coming on board, and had to hurry down as fast as possible and leave them; that he lived on nothing but his eggs and biscuit, till discovered by the captain, not even getting a drop of water, except what he had the good fortune to catch in his hand, one day, when a vessel of water, in the cabin, was upset during a squall, and some of it ran down through the cracks of the floor over him.

CONGRESS.

The House of Representatives, after being engaged nearly all day on Saturday, on the bill authorising the Secretary of the Treasury to exchange 12 millions of stock bearing an interest of six and seven per cent. for stock bearing five per cent. finally passed it by a vote of 99 to 55.

A bill has been reported in the House, providing for a Naval Peace establishment, which proposes that the number and description of the officers should rate thus: One Rear Admiral—five Commodores—nineteen Captains—twenty-three Masters commandant—one hundred and forty lieutenants, &c.

In the House of Representatives, the resolutions regarding the acknowledgment of the Independence of the Spanish Provinces in South America, have been unanimously adopted, with the exception of one dissenting voice—and the dissentient, Mr. Garnett, to do away any wrong impression which his vote might occasion, has been permitted to enter the following declaration on the journal of the House:

I, Robert S. Garnet, member from Virginia, make the following declaration: That I voted against the recognition of the independence of the late American Provinces of Spain, because considering it a matter of policy, not of principle, I believed that no immediate advantage could grow out of it to either country, whilst many considerations affecting the interest of both, rendered it at this time inexpedient. I am not opposed to the independence of the late provinces; on the contrary, in common with the rest of my countrymen, I heartily rejoice in its accomplishment, and in the prospects of freedom and happiness which it opens to them.

American Montgolfiers.—James Bennett, of Philadelphia, who petitioned Congress last week for exclusive privileges in air navigation has found a competitor, in D. B. Lee, of the same city, (on whose behalf a petition was this morning presented by Mr. Keyes,) who claims a priority of invention, and states that Bennett must have borrowed or stolen the invention from him. An aerial combat, in their respective machines, at a convenient elevation from the earth, in the presence of the committee, to whom the subject is referred, would be the best way to settle the dispute, and furnish, at the same time, the necessary evidence of the practicability of the project.—*Wash. ANOTHER MAIL ROBBERY.

The great Southern Mail from this city to New-York, was robbed on Wednesday night, of two packages of letters, one of which contained thirty-four single letters, and the other twenty free letters from Washington city for the State of Maine. The portmanteau had been cut, near the chain, as was the canvas bag inside, just sufficiently large to take out an entire bundle. The portmanteau was in the front boot, under the driver, and the fact must have been perpetrated while the horses were changing, or when examining the way-mail. The driver of the mail on the route from Kingston to New-York, very imprudently suffered a way passenger to take a place alongside of him, who intimated that he was about shipping for the West-Indies—this same person, it is said, applied for a passage in the stage from New-York to New-Brunswick, the next day, and having arrived at the latter place, was safely lodged in jail, on suspicion of having been connected with the robbery. The Postmaster at New-York has offered one hundred dollars reward for the discovery of the villain, and we hope justice will shortly overtake him.

THE FINE ARTS.—Our country in its infant state, in order to enlarge, improve, and bring to light the latent spark of genius which is occasionally displaying itself in various parts of the union, will find it necessary to encourage and foster every improved master that may chance to visit our shores—and we can say, that the citizens of Philadelphia are eminently qualified to judge the merits of any professional character. We have seen a portrait of JOSEPH BONAPARTE, Esq. whose residence among us entitles him to a rank among the distinguished citizens of the republic, which was done in Crayon, by Mr. G. PENSICO, an Italian artist, now residing in this city. It bears a strong similitude to the features of Napoleon, and has been pronounced a correct likeness of the original. As the public may be gratified with a view of this happy combination of talents, by calling at No. 86 Chesnut street, we hope they will profit by the invitation.

The Select and Common Councils have appropriated 165,000 dollars, to defray the expences of this city for the current year.

Mutations of Fortune.—For several years past the citizens of Philadelphia have known a poor man, whose family subsisted partly by charity and partly by the produce of the sale of a few almanacs or blacking balls.—This man was formerly in affluent circumstances; but misfortunes fell thick upon him, and hurled him from the respectable station which he occupied in society, to the lowest depths of poverty. After suffering for many years all the misery that follows the prostration of property, fortune has again smiled upon her victim. A short time since, by the death of a relation in the West Indies, he succeeded to an estate said to be worth $400,000.

GOOD NEWS.—We have the pleasure to announce the arrival, from the Coal Pits on the river Schuylkill, of twenty-one arks, laden with two hundred bushels of Coals each, say the whole about four thousand two hundred bushels. They are under the superintendance of Thomas S. Ridgway, and are unloading at the new landings of Jacob Ridgway, Esq. just below the Water Works. This being the first large arrival of Coal, by means of the Schuylkill Navigation, of ninety miles, it is hailed with peculiar pleasure.

COMMUNICATION.

Travellers to New-York are informed that the Columbian Coach and Steam Boat Line will leave this city to-morrow (Sunday) at 7 o'clock, for New-York, through in one day, via Bordentown and South Amboy; and for the future will continue to leave every week day at 6 o'clock and Sundays at 7 o'clock, for the season.

Tuesday, the 9th inst. is recommended by the Presbytery of this city, as a day of Humiliation, Fasting and Prayer.

Yesterday the weather was as warm as mid-summer—in the evening there was a plentiful fall of rain, accompanied by some vivid flashes of lightning and heavy thunder, which is rather early in the season.

HORRID OUTRAGE AND MURDER.

A horrid murder was committed in Lancaster on Monday last, the history of which is almost unprecedented. Mary Lechler wife of John Lechler was found in an upper apartment of the house, where, from visible indications on the neck, she was either strangled or hanged. About the same time of night, a villain broke into the house of Herbart Haag, who, with his wife rose in order to detect the transgressor, when a pistol was fired through the window and lodged two balls in the breast of the wife. Her death was instantaneous. Two other balls fired immediately after, happily did no injury.

To augment the horror of this deed, it is believed that Mary Leshler's husband John was the perpetrator. His having absconded the same night gives colouring to this supposition. A proclamation has been issued for his apprehension.

The U. S. frigate Macedonian, Capt. Biddle, sailed from Boston on Tuesday last, on a cruise off the coast of Cuba, to aid in suppressing piracy.

By recent intelligence received from St. Bartholomews, we learn that the weighty charges made some) time since in the American journals, of the governor of that Island colluding with privateersmen, is now reiterated, under circumstances of aggravated atrocity and insult.

SINGING.

The second, and by far the more lucid and scientific Lecture of the two, upon this subject, was delivered by Mr. Philipps, on Thursday evening last, to a crowded, a very fashionable, and a very brilliant audience. The reputation which had been acquired by the excellence of the first, induced not only the attendance of a large assemblage of ladies, and of professed musicians and amateurs of music, but of the professors and teachers of other sciences. The room was graced by the presence of beauty, taste, and learning, and the admirable Lecturer acquitted himself to the satisfaction of the whole auditory. He was easy and graceful, in the delivery, and most uncommonly distinct and articulate in the utterance of his language. One of the most distinguished and uniformly acknowledged critics of the day, declared this Lecture to be a composition of the purest and most perspicuous style, containing in the construction of it, a train of cogent, resistless and undeniable reasoning—and in its formation and method, evidence of uncommon judgment. We think no one who was present on Thursday evening, will dispute the verity of this assertion.

In the number of exemplifications which Mr. Philipps introduced, he decorated his Lecture with a train of well applied anecdote, facetious as well as illustrative, and threw into the relation of them an air and manner at once so pleasing and interesting, as to beguile the mind from an impression of prolixity, had the continuation of the discourse been extended to the following morning.—When he designed, also, to enforce any particular principle by means of strong emphasis, and the selection of the most prominent antithesis, he was very far from accompanying the expression, as "many of our orators do," by the least contortion of the countenance—on the contrary, his face assumed a pleasing and persuasive aspect, and was every way in consonance with the gracefulness of his attitudes, and the symmetry of his figures. On this subject we might enlarge, and when that gentleman has departed we shall take leave to do so.

After elucidating the principles of other departments of the science, he went into an eloquent description of church music, and gave an illustration of "improved delivery" of devotional psalmody in the example of the hundredth psalm "WITH ONE CONSENT LET ALL THE EARTH," &c. He brought to the understanding of those before ignorant of psalmody, and confirmed the suppositions of many there present, who practice it, the facility with which the rules laid down for the application of accurate emphasis, may be adopted in congregational singing.

When Mr. Philipps leaves us we shall ascertain the loss which will be sustained by the absence of so much musical talent, so much literary acquirement, and from whom we have derived knowledge, which without his aid, we might have been a long while seeking.

STATE LEGISLATURE.

The legislature of this state adjourned on Tuesday last, after a session of nearly four months in which one hundred and seventy-two laws were passed—the titles of which, as published in the Harrisburg Chronicle, may be seen at this office.

The Senate rejected the supplement to the act laying a duty on retailers of foreign merchandize.

The new auction bill has become a law, by which 2,000 dollars per annum are to be paid for a general license; 1,000 dollars for selling all articles but dry goods and groceries; and furniture and other non-dutiable articles may be sold at the dwellings of the owners without any auction license at all.

On Monday last Messrs. Duncan, Raguet, Wurts, and Coleman of the Senate, entered a protest against the provisions of the bill for dividing the state into districts for the election of members of Congress, so far as it related to the city of Philadelphia, and the counties of Delaware and Lancaster. The minority in the house of representatives also signed a protest. Shortly afterwards, the Governor returned the bill with his objections, which excited great commotion in the house of representatives, and an ineffectual attempt was made to pass it by a vote of two thirds of the whole number. A new bill was then reported, by the provisions of which Lancaster, Chester, and Delaware, were made one district to elect three members, the county of Philadelphia, with a population of 73,295 (less by 6,705 than the duplicate of the ratio,) was empowered to elect two members, and the city of Philadelphia, with a population of 63,802 was empowered to elect one member, leaving an unrepresented fraction of twenty three thousand eight hundred and two!

This bill passed the House of Representatives. When brought before the Senate, the members from this district moved to amend it so as to make the city and county of Philadelphia one district, to elect three members, and thus a fraction of about 17,000, would be divided among the three members. On motion of Mr. Bernard, this amendment was so modified as to include Delaware county, and give to the district the election of four members. Our senators opposed this, on the ground that it would leave a larger fraction in Lancaster, but it was agreed to, and Chester reannexed to Montgomery, so that Lancaster was again with an unrepresented fraction of nearly 29,000. The House refused to concur in these amendments, and a committee of conference was appointed, by which a new bill was reported, which finally was passed by the legislature, and has obtained the signature of the Governor. Agreeable to its provisions, the counties of Lancaster, Chester, and Delaware, are to form one district, to elect three members; and the city and county of Philadelphia are to be divided into three districts, each of which is to elect one member. The city, exclusive of Cedar and Market Wards, is to form one district. Southwark, Moyamensing, Passyunk, Blockley, and Kingsessing, with Cedar and New Market Wards, are to form another, and the balance of the county is to form a third. [Union.

The elegant ship Moss, was launched on Tuesday morning, about twenty minutes before eleven o'clock. She glided into the river in handsome style, amidst the acclamations of a numerous concourse of spectators. Her figure head is a very correct likeness of the lady of Mr. J. Moss, one of the owners.

Letters from New-Orleans, to the middle of last month, state, a great failure in the wheat crops in the country bordering on the Ohio. It was expected that very little flour would be sent from those places to New-York, in consequence. In Kentucky, the tobacco crops have been unprecedented, both as to quality and quantity.

Scare Crow.—A gentleman in England, whose grounds were constantly robbed by poachers, procured a man's leg from the hospital, and hung it up with a label requesting the owner to send for it. This plan had the effect to save his grounds from encroachment.

Mr. Elijah Sexton, jr. of Chenango county, N. Y. shot in the town of Louden, in 27 days, 58 deer in 62 shots, and secured 53 of them. He killed 27 deer in 21 shots. He fired 8 times on the run, and killed 6. He must be a real bucktail.

It is said she has confessed the perjury, and that she was advised to adopt this abominable scheme to obtain money by some of her abandoned associates.—Salem Reg.

DRAMATIC SUMMARY.

WALNUT STREET.—This evening, will be revived the tragedy of Alfonso, King of Castile, and the admired farce of All the World's a Stage.—On Monday eve, the drama of the Snow-Storm will be presented with singular attractions; the managers, who are ever ready to contribute to the amusements of the public, have procured the services of the four DOGS, whose docility in harness has excited some curiosity, and they have been well trained for the purposes of the night.—Mr. Jefferson, takes his benefit on Wednesday eve—the friends of the drama will not be backward at this opportunity to testify their continued approbation of the talents of their old favourite.—Our old friend Mr. Bray, has arrived in this city, and is at present domesticated at the house of Mr. Francis. We trust he will make arrangements to appear before us once more, if his health will permit him, and particularly in Lord Ogleby.

PRUNE STREET.—This theatre has been closed for several nights in consequence of the decease of Mrs. Stanislas, the consort of the proprietor.—It will be opened however, this evening, with the tragedy of the Revenge, and other entertainments. —Pizarro on Monday—on Tuesday a Satirical Drama, written with great ability after the manner of Fielding, by a well known literary character in Charleston, called "THE SEA SERPENT," will be presented for the benefit of Mr. Utt, the prompter

NEW-YORK.—On Tuesday eve, Master G. F. Smith personated Octavian in the play of the Mountaineers, and on the 3d inst. he performed the part of Hamlet, for his benefit, with Miss Johnson, as Ophelia. The drama of the Spy, and the pageant of the Coronation of Henry V. with the farce of the Mock Doctor, were the performances on Thursday evening.—Mr. Philipps is re-engaged at this theatre and makes his first appearance in the course of next week. The people are to be congratulated on the opportunity they will have of hearing his inimitable and admirable Lectures upon Singing, which he delivers with such distinguished ability.—The new melo drama, of Lochiel, is announced for representation on Monday. To suit the style and taste of Mr. Cowell some new and comic music has been composed by the well known Mr. Clifton of Baltimore.—Mr. P. H. Taylor assisted by Mr. Wm. Taylor, as leader of the Orchestra, (late from London) and Mrs. Holman and Mr. Julius Metz, gives a concert at the City Hotel, on Tuesday next.

BOSTON.—The benefit of Mr. Morrell, (Box-keeper,) took place on Monday last, for which he selected Shakspear's celebrated comedy of As you like it—Rosalind, (1st time,) by Mrs. Duff. On the 3d inst. a comedy, in 5 acts, called Folly as it Flies, after which the new Scotch ballet of Auld Robin Gray, and the melo-drama of the Broken Sword, for the benefit of Mr. Worrell, the Scene painter. The benefit of Mr. Duff, was arranged for Monday next.

LEXINGTON.—The manager, Mr. Collins, took his benefit on the 22d ult. on which occasion Mr. Hayes of Boston and Louisville, made his first appearance in an engagement of six nights, in Major O'Flaherty.

SAVANNAH.—Mr. and Mrs. F. Brown's benefit took place on the 27th ult. when Mr. Brown personated Rolla in the tragedy of Pizarro—and Eveleen's Bower was sung by Mr Keen, between the play and the farce of the Rendezvous. The theatre was to close in a few nights.

FOREIGN.—Madame Catalina made her appearance at the Musical Festival, in Liverpool, on the 29th of January, after an absence of nine years. Mr. Rochsa is now in treaty with Madame Catalina, for an engagement to perform at the ensuing Oratorios at Covent Garden Theatre. The lady asks but 3000 pounds for her services for the season, consisting of about 15 or 20 nights; the gentleman has offered 2000, which offer the lady has thought proper to reject, and thus the matter at present rests.

THE OLIO.

"Variety's the very spice of life,
That gives it all its flavour."

A COURT AUDIENCE.

Old South, a witty Churchman reckon'd,
Was preaching once to Charles the Second,
But much too serious for a court,
Who at all preaching made a sport—
He soon perceiv'd his audience nod,
Deaf to the zealous man of God.
The doctor stopp'd—began to call,
"Pray 'wake the Earl of Lauderdale:—
"My lord? why 'tis a monstrous thing!
"You snore so loud—you'll wake the King."

[For the Saturday Evening Post.]

CHARADE.

ADDRESSED TO A LADY.

Permit me, Madam, to come uncalled into your Ladyship's presence, and by dividing myself, add greatly to my consequence.

So exalted am I in the character of my first, that I have trampled on the pride of Kings, and the greatest potentates have bowed down to embrace me; yet the dirtiest kennel in the dirtiest street, is not too foul to have me for its inmate.

In my second, what infinite variety! I am rich as the eastern nabob, yet poor as the weeping object of your benevolence—I am mild and gentle as the spring, yet savage and cruel as the wintry blast; I am young, beautiful, and happy, yet old, deformed, and wretched—'tis from the highest authority I dare pronounce myself your superior: yet few instances are there to prove it, and many are the proofs against it. But your Ladyship is tired, and wishes my re-union—it is done, and I have no other merit than remaining as before,

Your Ladyship's humble servant,
ROUNDOLLOLDAY.

[For the Saturday Evening Post.]

Meadville, April 1, 1822.

A SOLUTION for the Charade addressed to the authorities of our general and state governments, on behalf of those who fought during the Revolutionary war, by a Veteran, which appeared in the Post of the 16th March last.

A PENSION.

Proof that a man can be his own grandfather.—There was a widow and her daughter-in-law, and a man and his son. The widow married the son, and the daughter the old man: the widow was therefore mother to her husband's father, consequently grandmother to her own husband. They had a son, to whom she was great-grandmother: now as the son of a great-grandmother must be either a grandfather or a great uncle, this boy was therefore his own grandfather.

SWEAR NOT AT ALL.

In the reign of James the first, a man being reprimanded for swearing, replied, he did not know there was any harm in it.—No harm in it, (said a person present,) why do you not know the commandment, Swear not at all?—"Why I do not swear at all," replied he, "I only swear at those who offend me."

CLASSICAL CORRECTION.

Soon after the accession of George I. a mayor at Leicester, who always supposed that Anno Domini was Latin for Queen Anne, hearing his clerk read a mittimus, when he came to the Anno Domini, cried out with some warmth, "And pray, sir, why not GEORGEO DOMINI? Sure you forget yourself."

A CURIOUS COMMENT.

The motto which was inserted under the arms of William, Prince of Orange, on his accession to the English crown was, "Non rapui sed recepi."

"I did not steal, but received."

This being shewn to Dean Swift, he said, with a sarcastic smile, "The receiver is as bad as the thief."

THE FIRST OF APRIL.

A writer in the National Intelligencer, has the following remarks:—

There are some persons in every society who make it their business to be merry at the expense of their less sagacious neighbours, and avail themselves of every possible circumstance that will favour their propensity to quiz. The annual return of this day is sure to play shame with thousands, who, on perhaps every other day in the year contrive to keep their wits about them. The good old fashioned chronicle-like folks, who are generally able to tell us the meaning of all old fashioned things, and the origin of all old-fashioned customs and practices, have never yet explained the reason why all mankind should be, or at least attempt to be, witty on the first day of April. I remember to have read in some books that April foolery was not known in England until the time of Killigrew, whose waggery was tolerated in the court of Charles the Second. Critics think they discover some allusion to it in Sterne's Tristram Shandy. It may be, that something of the sort is under cover of the numerous pauses, blanks, and dashes, with which that facetious writer abounds, but if so, it is, I confess, too deeply laid for me to fathom. However, in reading the 39th chapter of Leviticus the other day, I was surprized to find many expressions bearing on this subject, but all more or less vague. But the verses from the 10th to the 15th, inclusive, which relative to certain rites and ceremonies of the Jews, observed during their month Abib or Nisan, (part of April and part of May,) appear to me to prove more plainly than any other passage, that this seemingly unmeaning custom had its origin as far back as the days of the patriarchs, and on which all Biblical critics would do well to

PONDER.

Onions.—Mr. Macdonald, gardener to the Duke Buccleuch and Queensbury, at Dalkeith, has communicated to the Caledonian Horticultural Society, an important improvement in the culture of Onions. As soon as the produce of the seed beds attain a proper size, he choses a moist day, takes up the plants, and after immersing them in a puddle composed of one part soot and three parts earth, transplants them (drilling) about four inches asunder, in rows, and afterwards carefully hoes them when required. This process answers with any kind of Onion, and the root equals in size the best Spanish Onions, heavier for its bulk and more pungent. Where the Onion is cultivated on a large scale, boys and girls may be employed in transplanting them, at a cheap rate.

BALM OF COLUMBIA.

An important recent Chemical discovery.

THE ladies and gentlemen of this city and elsewhere, are respectfully informed, that John Oldridge has fortunately discovered, by the power of chemistry, the grand desideratum of preventing Hair from falling off in FORTY-EIGHT HOURS. This balm will most absolutely, in the course of a short time, make the Hair grow healthy and thick. J. O. is well aware that many fraudulent and impositious Oils, &c have been imposed on the public, and therefore prejudice will be severe against his discovery, until trial shall convince his patrons that such a thing exists in nature as a certain preventative against the loss of hair. This valuable balm will cause whiskers and beards to grow rapidly. No danger need be apprehended to the human system by the application of this capilary restorative. The public may rest assured that it helps nature, and is perfectly harmless.

Persons desirous of becoming agents for the sale of the Balm of Columbia, will please address the proprietor by letter, (post paid,) with a suitable reference.

Prepared and sold, at $1 a pint, or 50 cents for a half pint bottle, by JOHN OLDRIDGE, No. 55½ South Front street, and at No. 11 North Fourth street, Philadelphia.

RECOMMENDATION.

WE, the undersigned, do hereby certify, that we have, in various cases, used the Balm of Columbia, lately discovered by John Oldridge, of Philadelphia, and have found it highly serviceable not only as a preventative against the falling off of hair, but also as a restorative. We, therefore, feel assured of its excellence, and consider it valuable and well worthy the attention of the public. In testimony whereof, we have added our respective signatures, and given it our warmest recommendation.

Very few have been known to have the Tooth-ache, or Rheumatism in the Gums, who have constantly used it. For sale by THOMAS S. ANNERS, Sole Agent for the proprietor, No. 141 Chesnut street.
